

Mapping Gender Struggles

Gender as Field of Conflict in Contemporary Social Movements

23.-25.11.2023
Munich

Gender seems to be a central category of contemporary social movements: It is the core issue of the globally strengthening feminist and queer protests. At the same time, women have become particularly visible as spokespersons and central actors of social movements, as in Fridays for Future and Black Lives Matter or the revolutions in Belarus and Iran. In contrast, gender is a political issue of right-wing mobilization in Europe and worldwide, be it in the sense of an openly articulated anti-feminism or in the appropriation of feminist concerns for racist and nationalist politics.

Is this observed centrality of gender actually new or what has changed?

And what can we learn from this about current social conditions and crises?
